Jack, it appeared, who rented backed a spartments near the city, had received the message from Manicira in the course. Mystifical at first, he had at length managed to translate the words into acnor, and made arrangements to be at Southampton to meet the vessel. On the all-important day while at breakfast he recollected some vital insiders affair out hurrierloff to eathild his husinus partner, leaving the measage and its solution beside his plate, and in that unlucky interval something imponed. hreathe freely—can vagarry grasp how that one fatal slip of mine, at a moment when the seeies in the Transval were balancing so herathicsly might have come near in specing a national disaster. Looking back, it nil seems dreamlike—incredible, My hard-carned holiday—I had worked in the tape government office narry three years without one—was not time for six one the faintest idea that I was to be let off those six maoths and, moreover, to carry a diapateh invested, in the light of possible events, with an importance beyand wants.

"There it is. You thuroughly miscristically in the light of possible events, with an importance beyand wants.

"There it is. You thuroughly miscristically in the last struck dack had swayed silently upon an inthing. Table Companions

Are important. The man who eats alone loses half his pleasure, and much of the benefit of his meal.

Vour doctor will fell you that pleasant companionship is almost as essential as food.

We cannot always have with us our most congenial triends, but there is one table companion we need never be without.

We mean a cup of good tea. A good pure tea is synonymous with Chase & Sanborn's package teas.
These teas, because they are pure, are a ted help to every one.

Tea is a healthful fonic when a is not a feel of the party of the pure.

Tea is a healthful lonic when it is pure. Tea to be beneficial must have quality; low grade teas do not possess tonny degree the fonic effect. Because Chase & Sanborn's teas are sold only in half-pound and pound air tight, leaded forms, one may be sure they are fresh and of full strength.

Writion for the Thanksgiving Day Exer-nises of the Ninth Grade, Hunt School, 1898, by Mabal Wilson Richards, Age

This rier two lumdred years ago, Soice first the Piliginis came. And dotted so long and patiently To give this tand a name. There arek was hard and tiresome At last they set a day. For peace and rest from labor too A slay to read and peay.

Than then they picked their jumphins fine Aret reased the golden core. And haded the plad Thanksgiring day the dawning of that more. They went to church with solemn mien, And slowly honeward went, Where, taking of their Sunday gowns, houn to thrit work they bent. The little tables first wers set, The putdings were placed on, The whate see and the Jadans For fish and lowl had gone, Int sees the hunters laden well. But his hand lowl and deer Returned to busy families. To pase the day in cheer.

The indians by a heaty Were peaceful, two and kind, And tweter natured friends than they it would be hard to find. All day the prayer and leasting Feor on tell night set in, And then the Indians left them, Bearing peaceful thoughta within.

The braves returned to wigwams, Laid down the dart and how Their squaws and children gathering tound The camp fire's ruddy glow.

The Camp fir's ruddy glow.

To bed and sterp retired,
And were desamine of their pleasures.
Eve the survet aim was delively homes,
And homesess bond as we,
And homesess lood as we,
To tind they poured their many thanks,
With joy that they were free

DIRT CLEARANCE.

T is a good plan for every bather to know something of the soap he uses. There is a well-founded objection to using a floor-cleaning soap upon the human body. Ivory Soap is the bather's soap. It costs more than common soaps, but the difference is in the ingredients and making. Why not treat yourself with a little respect. Is not the human skin with its married out delicacy entitled to pure soap? I work soap—it floats.

man much rovicel by the clerka in the store, for, as an expert, he drmanded ant received a generous salary. The clerka all spoke of him, however, as "Dill Fenn," and, becomes they had little in common with him, they regarded him as a most unsocial being.

In reality he was a shy, retiring man, nearly 45 years of age; auxious to be frientily, but unaware of the best incthol to adopt, finding treasier to be sileut, but in his own thoughts, than to exert himself and enter in with the chair of the lada behind the counters. He seemed to be always alone; patient, solated that would make so little illferient on the same narrow groove in which it run, apparently waiting only for the death that would make so little illferient on the same narrow groove in which it run, apparently waiting only for the death that would make so little illferient on the same narrow groove in which it run, apparently waiting only for the death that would make so little illferient on the property of the same narrow groove in which it run, apparently waiting only for the death that would make so little illferient on the property of the same narrow groove in which it run, apparently waiting only for the death that would make so little illferient.

"I can't understand what you think at allilay, Feus," his employer had said to him once, and Fenn had looked up with his rare, singularly sweet smile, onli said?

"Mr. White, have you never had a past?"

That was all anyons within the store knew of Fenn. His landially found him a most excellent tenant, who paid promptily for his one small room, and never foand fanlt, even on the cook's tay out. No one had ever seen him angry, but, on the contrary, no one had ever seen him fayous. His life ran on evenly, as andisturbed as any clock under his water had a say of the same him angry. His appeared with equal promptiuess when the store closed for the night. His luncheons he had eaten of the same restaurant for 15 years. Except for the fart he did his work with mianteness of an extraordinary kinil, he appeared the must cuamonplace individual in the city.

"What do you mean?" she asked, faintly.
"Nothing to frighten you, dear. I want you to marry me still. I have wanted you earry day since we parted, but I thought you had long ago courried—there is no uses going into thin. We are not children now. How id you feel about it, Ellen? Are you willing to paas the rest of your life with me."
Ellea lifted her eyes so his—eyes that appeared young, become redeemed from age by the radiant light of love within them.
"I will be just on you say," she said, the most commonplace individual in the city.

One bright spring ordering, when the sun poured in through the broad windows, turning the jewels displayed there to liquid fire, and when the soft wind came puffing in at the doors as though determined to lure away every restless clerk for a froile in the rountry, Mr. Fran panied for a moment in speak to one of the men.

"Good nording," he said, contemply, "can you tell me what the date is?"

"The tath of May," replied the one addiressed, samewhat surprised at this departure from Mr. Fran's maintride,

There was a moment's pause before nother spake up, cheerfully:

"Many happy returns of the day,

"I want a vacation, sir," he said. "I liaven't asked for one in many years, but I want one now. My nesistant can do all the work we are likely to fave at this time of the year."

"I shall be gloit to give it the you, Mr. Fenn, but why have you steelded so subdenly?"

"Well, you see, sir," Fenn replied, "thia laidy hos just consenied to become ony wife, and we have waited so long for our honeymoon that we want a proportionately long honeymoon now."—Chicago Tribune.

In the corner, with his minal impassive mien.
"Paor oil Fenn," the clerk said, compositionately. "I dare say he is hinely."
As the morning wore owny towards noon, a young woman entered the shop and approached Mr. Fenn's desk. He glanced up with his customary bok in quiet attention, which changed suddenly to one of keen interest as he eagerly scanned the newsomer's fare.

Mr. Fanu, with a sudden hearthreas, grasped the slender gloved hand extended to him. "limid-by," he sold. "You came lo like the spring sanshine, Miss Lucy."

After the girl had gone Fenn sat for some momenta lost to thought. How many memories the girl had attreed within him. How like ahe was to that other girl—Ellea—whom he had once known.

With a deep sigh be turned, from force of habit, to the watch before him. Ha well remembered that disagreeable little monitor which had disturbed on many pleasant hoars! His secuatomed flagers present the large, gid-fashioned plain which protected the works from dust, and there fell into his hands a folded paper, yellowed with ago, which opened as he reversally touched it.

There, exposed to view, was the face of the young man who had glanced back at him from the mirror, and with it was a withered voice, which lightly fluttered out. Is was brown and dry, but it properred its freehness and fragrance in a faithful woman's heart,

NOBLE CIFT

Of $2500 to Tufts Library by Mr. Amos W. Stetson,

In Memory of His Beloved Mother.

Mr. Amos W. Sietson presents to the town of Weymouth for its Tufts Library the sum of $2,500 with the following helter:—

Boston, Jun. 21, 1900.
To the Trustees of Tufts Library of Weymouth, Mass.;

To the Trustees of Tufts Library of Weymouth, Mass.;
In memory of my beloved mather, who was born in Weymouth, I propose to establish a small fund to be called the "Susannah Hunt Stelson Faml," the income of which is to be expended in the purchase of books for said library. Inclosed is my chape for twenty-live huntred dollars for said purpose, the same to be invested in the mole or bond of said town of Weymouth, Mass., for said amount, at a ratio of interest not less than four per cent, per amount; and whenever said town shall full to pay be the trusteen of said library said interest for one year, then the principal of said fund shall revert to my heirs at law.

Awas W. Strison.
That Mr. Steison's mobile gift will be graitefully accepted by the town, and that laterest of at least 4 ner cent, will be contamined by a promet note.

nd that laterest of at least 4 per cent, will be guaranteed by a proper note or bond, is not to be doubted. The income will probably be devoted to the parchase of a class of more expensive books than the Library might otherrise feel able to buy. A suitable plate or luserlytion will be placed in each hook no miled, thus honoring the memory of Mr. Stelson's mother and also bringing constantly to the mind of each reader the generosity of the down, ok no mided, thus honoring the memory of Mr. Stelson's mother and also largest present in the order named. Hooper shrank from the task, but the judge lasisted. When in tail dushel and was ready to sign, there came a tap at the loor and a stranger was ashered in. He locked the ion aftee him, and the judge kul a low conversation with him. The confession was duly signed and witnessel. It set forth Hooper's meressity to obtain funds further than those available, and how he had taken from time to time, showing Rand fieltlious notes, so that liand had every reason to auppose the bank was making bane.

In abort, he had made the nutries in perfect good fulth, and then when the stealing was made known ha had kept slirner, remembering all the henefia rereived. It was, of rourse, a questionable thing for him to do, but there was no doubting the middlift of the made character.

That night the index stanted for

"And Ned, this really must be the last. I can't marry yon. No, dear, please don't go all neer it ugal. I know that it would be a great wrong to you to say yes. It would always be a himfrance to yon. We would have no friends, and a young lawyer must have friends. Who would reme to your loones if they knew your wife was the lampher of hand, the embezzler?"

That was where the judge almost olicewered thinself. He entheaveller who was the lampher of hand, the embezzler?"

That was where the judge almost olicewered thinself. He entheavel Rand to years hard labor and he had still it years to serve. It was a price case and not quite clear. So this was the motherless girl be had beard so much hand.

"Now, we here Alice." the your and I'll try cleanga her slewn."

"Now," said the judge, "this tangle can be straightened out. You bring Allre hera two weeks from to-night, and I'll try to change her siewa."

At last the night rame. The judge was deridedly nervous. The bell rang, and told for about the judge, and she blanked prettilly when he was lated duced.

After he had explained at some length that his eavesdrapping was gitte accidents, he began to argue with her on the matter. She took the same high ground as before—that it was doing Ned a wrong. And is had son every opportunity i can, so long na it deeas't bother you. Bal know all about it and he's with now."

The judge wantrd to shout: "Good for dad," but he didu't.

Then after another longer silrace they irft him alone. As he road slowly home he turned the little tragged over and over in his mind and the more he thought inbout it the more he fet that he had made a mistake by staying and listening. At last he evolered a plan calculated to ease his own conselence and give the young man some courage for the last few down and knew tho whole stery.

Grainally he found himself forced in a conclusion for which there was little reason. He sonehow thought that Hooper was the guilty man and hand tha innocent. He had known a lew similar cases of quixotic grafitude.

The next day he called at the bankling house of Hooper & to. As he was leaving he met Hooper face to fuer. The man went white, and staggered against the door jand as if he had been atrack.

"Why—how d'ye do? Why—I didn't against the door jamb us if he land been struck.

The group in the rorner of the hotel corrhior were taiking about ghosts, and as neual on such occasions, some reinstable stories were told.

Finally a small man with a red heard spoke up. "I dislike to advance my throrirs on the subject," he said, "lim! I had a little experience myself last summer, which, with your permission, will marrate simply for what it is worth. I live in a very old house an Bourhon street," he continued, "in the rear of which is a small bricked coart, connecting with a passage leading to n side gate. At the back of the cour is a fall, 12 ar 18 feet high, separating us from the neatlest and showing fraces.

is a fail, 12 ar 18 feet high, separating us from the nost lat and showing traces in the corner of a narrow door, which was long ago filled in with masonry.

There is nothing in the least unusual about the place, yet for some undefinable reason it always affected me uuplemently. However, to come to the point, I happened to go to the back dinor of the houss for some purpose or uther nea afternaon last July, and there in the earth, eart the cutrance to the passageway, was what appeared to the passageway was was appeared to the passageway was w to the passageway, was what appeared to be an old man with a lang, gray beard.

"His was talk and gaunt, and was at anding in an attitude of profound meditation. I was not more than 12 feet away at the time, and I assure you I saw the figure as distinctly as I see any of you. This, you will pleas hear in mind, occurred in broad daylight, at about three o'clock, as nearly as I can remember, and I would like to add that I was in perfect health and not likelikely also will be a see the door. I did not speak af the mattee tam y family, and, as farns I know, they themselves have never had any unusual experience in the house.

"Neither have I been able to learn of any tradition that night be associated directly or indirectly with the episods I have described." The slory was told in piain, matter-of-fact way, and its simplicity made it impressive.

"That was certainly a rrmarkable caperience," said one of the party, after a pause. "ilsa the old man ever appeared to you alnees."

"Oh, yes," replied the story tellir. "I know the old chap vrry well. He is our nilkman."

"Though and lightining!" exvisiment the other, ladignantly, "what the dicket and good mean, then, by saying it was a ghost?"

Fattening the pigs demands care as well as corn. To derive the most in the shortest period of time the pig should be comfortable and contented. Fossi may be given three times a day, and, in addition in corn, a mess of tora and milk or ent clover hay, scalded and sprinkled with tran, may be allowed. If a variety of food is the rola the pig will make greater gain, because its wants will be satisfied.
